Hi all,

Raji Heyrovská is giving an an informal version of the talk she presented at the ACS meeting in March. She will be presenting this Thursday, the 13th of April, in the large conference room, from 12.30-1.30 p.m. All are welcome to attend. See below for her title and abstract.

Christina

"Sorry Lewis, Bancroft was right: The concentration/activity controversy and the survival of the Journal of Physical Chemistry"

Physical chemists and solution chemists will be surprised to know how the Lewis/ Bancroft controversy on the theory of electrolyte solutions could have shaken the beginnings of the Journal of Physical Chemistry (JPC). The present author's research shows that Bancroft was indeed right and JPC owes its thanks to him. (The author thanks the friendly staff at the CHF, Philadelphia for help with the literature and a small grant.)
